CHIEF EDITOR · THE JKIS TIMES · JET KIDS INTERNATIONAL SCHOOL

Dear Readers,

It is with immense pleasure and pride that I welcome you to the second edition of The JKIS Times—a celebration of the spirit, talent, achievements, and cherished moments that make Jet Kids International School a vibrant community of learning and growth.

A school's true essence lies not only in its classrooms and lessons but also in the curiosity of its students, the creativity they express, the achievements they accomplish, and the memories they create along the way. This edition of The JKIS Times brings these moments together, giving us an opportunity to pause, reflect, and celebrate our journey.

As you explore the pages, you will discover the Students' Corner, where young voices find expression; the Students' Art Gallery, which showcases imagination and creativity; and the Parents' Corner, which reflects the valuable partnership between home and school. The pages ahead also capture our students' academic and sporting achievements, along with glimpses of our celebrations, events, and memorable moments.

"A school's true essence lies not only in its classrooms and lessons but also in the curiosity of its students, the creativity they express, the achievements they accomplish, and the memories they create along the way."

— ATA UR RAHMAN, CHIEF EDITOR

Behind every achievement is perseverance, behind every creative expression is imagination, and behind every successful event is the collective effort of many. This newsletter is our humble attempt to bring all these stories together and preserve them as treasured memories of our school.

I extend my heartfelt appreciation to our respected President, Secretary, Principal, Academic Head, Co-ordinators, teachers, students, parents, and the entire editorial team for their constant encouragement, enthusiasm, and valuable contributions.

May The JKIS Times continue to be a window into the vibrant life of our school, a record of our journey, and a source of inspiration for every member of the JKIS family.

Before Children Learn to Lead, They Need to Know They Belong

A personal reflection for parents, students and educators

AUGUST THEME • FREEDOM TO THINK. CONFIDENCE TO LEAD.

By Dr. Asmita Malpani

SECRETARY • JET KIDS INTERNATIONAL SCHOOL

Every morning, a parent leaves a child at the school gate.

Some children walk in without looking back. Some hold a parent's hand for a few extra seconds. Some are already talking about their friends before they have even entered the classroom. And some smile confidently while carrying a worry they do not yet know how to explain.

After so many years of working in education, I still do not see this as an ordinary morning routine.

Because when a parent sends a child to school, they are not handing us only a timetable, a schoolbag and a list of subjects. They are trusting us with something much more precious: a child who is still discovering who they are.

Children are constantly collecting small messages about themselves.

"Am I good at this?"

"Does my teacher notice me?"

"Will people laugh if my answer is wrong?"

"Do my ideas matter?"

"Can I try again after I fail?"

Most of these questions are never spoken aloud. Yet the answers slowly become a child's inner voice.

That is why I believe some of the most important work a school does will never fit neatly into a report card.

It happens when a teacher waits a few more seconds for a quiet child to answer instead of moving on.

It happens when a student makes a mistake in front of the class and discovers that the room does not collapse around them.

It happens when a child who has never volunteered before finally raises a hand.

It happens when someone says, "I did not understand," and is met with explanation instead of embarrassment.

It happens when a classmate makes space at a table, when a teacher remembers a small concern, when a child is trusted with a responsibility, and when effort is noticed even before the result becomes visible.

These moments may look small to adults. To a child, they are evidence.

Evidence that they belong.

Evidence that they can speak.

Evidence that they are allowed to grow.

This August, our theme is "Freedom to Think. Confidence to Lead." For me, those words begin here.

"Before children lead others, they first need to feel that their own voice has a place."

— DR. ASMITA MALPANI, SECRETARY

ESSAY CONTINUES ON PAGE 04 →

SECTION II • PERSPECTIVES & REFLECTIONS

Freedom to Think • Confidence to Lead

Freedom to think does not begin with giving children unlimited freedom. It begins by creating an environment where they do not have to be afraid of having a thought of their own. A child should be able to ask a question, disagree respectfully, change their mind, admit confusion and try something without first calculating whether they will look foolish.

And confidence to lead does not always begin on a stage with a microphone.

Sometimes leadership begins when a child includes someone who is standing alone. Sometimes it is saying, "I was wrong." Sometimes it is taking responsibility without being reminded. Sometimes it is speaking up when something is unfair. Sometimes it is simply trying again after a difficult day.

As adults, we often notice the visible milestones first: the certificate, the rank, the performance, the prize. They deserve celebration. But there is another kind of progress that deserves our attention too — the child who is becoming a little more confident in their own voice.

Parents play an extraordinary role in this.

I know how natural it is to ask at the end of the day, "What did you get?" or "How was the test?" Those questions come from care. But once in a while, we can make room for different questions too.

"What made you curious today?"

"Did anything make you uncomfortable?"

"Who did you help?"

"Did you make a mistake and learn something from it?"

"What are you proud of today that nobody gave you marks for?"

A child may not answer immediately. That is okay. The purpose is not to turn home into another interview. The purpose is to let them know that their thoughts, feelings, choices and small acts of courage are worth talking about. And to my students, I want to say something I wish every child heard often enough: You do not have to know every answer to be intelligent. You do not have to be the loudest person in the room to be a leader. You do not have to become somebody else in order to belong. And one difficult day does not decide what you are capable of becoming.

School is a place to learn mathematics, science, languages, history and much more. But it is also one of the first places where a child learns what it feels like to exist among people outside the family.

That experience matters.

Years later, children may forget the exact worksheet they completed on a particular Tuesday. But they often remember the teacher who believed in them, the friend who stood beside them, the first time their idea was taken seriously, or the day they realised that making a mistake did not make them a failure.

Those memories quietly shape the adults they become.

So when I think about the kind of education I want for our children, I think beyond what they will know when they leave school; I think about who they will become. I think about how they will see themselves. Will they trust their own voice? Will they listen to another person's voice with respect? Will they have the courage to ask, to attempt, to apologise, to begin again and to stand for something they believe is right? If we can help a child answer those questions with a little more confidence each year, then we are doing something meaningful. Because before children lead others, they first need to feel that their own voice has a place. And perhaps that is where real freedom in education begins.

"Before children lead others, they first need to feel that their own voice has a place."

The Laboratory of Curiosity

In the vibrant classrooms of Jet Kids International School, education is never a passive reception of facts, but an active, spirited voyage of discovery. From foundational grades to senior secondary academics, our educators cultivate an ecosystem where questions are celebrated, hypotheses are tested, and curiosity drives the curriculum.

Through structured peer seminars and hands-on investigative modules, students learn to defend their reasoning, listen critically to alternative perspectives, and synthesize complex real-world concepts into clear, articulate insights.

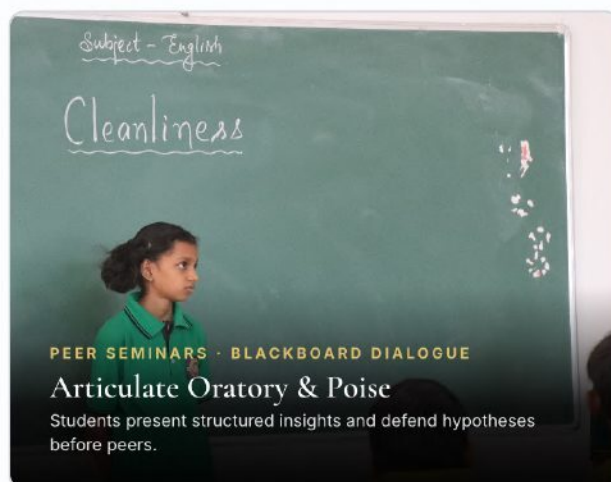

Equipped with modern scientific apparatus, interactive problem-solving kits, and bilingual literary resources, every learner is encouraged to bridge theoretical concepts with everyday application, nurturing intellect and practical competence in equal measure.

"When a child is empowered to question and experiment, learning becomes a lifelong instinct."

The Smile I Wear

By Khushi Akosh Rathod • Class 10

Every morning I wear a smile,
So no one asks me why.
It is easier to say, "I'm fine,"
Than to explain why I cry.

Some nights I stare into the dark,
Waiting for sleep to come.
But memories keep calling me,
And my heart becomes so numb.

I laugh with everyone I meet,
I speak as if I'm strong.
But deep inside, a quiet voice
Whispers, "Where do I belong?"

Sometimes, all I need is one kind word,
One gentle hand.
Not someone who can fix my pain,
Just someone who understands.

If one day you see a person
Smiling throughout the day,
Please look a little closer—
They may be breaking inside.

Be kind before it's far too late.
A heart can hide its scars.
The people who shine the brightest
Are often fighting the darkest wars.

And if you are that silent soul,
Please don't lose your light.
Even the longest, darkest night
Cannot stop the morning's light.

"Even the longest, darkest night cannot stop the morning's light."

The Power of Positive Thinking

By Kunal Kiran Dakhore • IX Ruby • Jet Kids International School Pusad

Positive thinking helps us face challenges with confidence. A positive attitude gives us the courage to learn from mistakes and keep improving.

Students who think positively can achieve their goals with hard work and dedication. A small change in our thoughts can bring a big change in our lives.

Always believe in yourself and keep moving forward.

The Lion and the Mouse

By Gauravi Nilesh Chauhan • Class-: 4th Div-: Ruby

Once, a lion caught a mouse. The mouse said, "Please let me go. One day, I will help you." The lion felt pity for the mouse and let him go.

One day, the lion was caught in a hunter's net. The mouse saw the lion trapped in the net. He went to the lion and gnawed the net with his sharp teeth. Soon, the lion was free.

Moral: Even a small friend can be a great help.

THE MORNING OF 15 AUGUST • CAMPUS COMMEMORATION

A Living Heritage of Freedom & Duty

As the dawn broke over Pusad on August 15, the central quadrangle of Jet Kids International School resonated with patriotic cadence. Students from primary through senior cohorts stood in synchronized rows, their voices joining in the National Anthem as the tricolour unfurled in the monsoon breeze. The ceremony was not merely a commemoration of history, but a collective recommitment to the values of inquiry, ethical leadership, and mutual respect.

From the solemn salute at the flagpole to the vibrant cultural presentations on stage, every moment of the morning reflected the school's enduring ethos: that freedom is not an inheritance taken for granted, but a daily duty to learn with curiosity, act with integrity, and serve the community with pride.

PEDAGOGICAL VALUES • NATION BUILDING

Nurturing Tomorrow's Torchbearers

In his ceremonial address, school leadership reminded students that true independence is realized when young minds cultivate the courage to think critically, question dogma, and lead with empathy. Through choral harmony, student speeches, and live classical instrumentation, the day celebrated India's pluralistic heritage while empowering each child to be a conscientious custodian of the nation's future.

As the ceremony concluded, students pledged to uphold constitutional values and environmental stewardship, demonstrating that the spirit of freedom shines brightest when channeled into intellectual excellence and social responsibility.

Hands in the Soil: Cultivating Living Empathy

At Jet Kids International School, sustainability is not an abstract theory confined to textbooks — it is an everyday, tactile practice. During the annual Vanamahotsav greening drive, students actively planted and adopted indigenous tree saplings along the campus perimeter, measuring root depth, tracking watering schedules, and learning the delicate biology of living ecosystems.

Each student cohort maintains ownership of their saplings, fostering a profound sense of responsibility for the environment that extends beyond school hours into their homes and communities.

CAMPUS CULTURE · HYGIENE & RECYCLING

Foundational Habits for a Greener Tomorrow

From the primary cohorts managing campus composting to the pre-primary "Clean-Up Champions" who take pride in keeping their learning spaces spotless, environmental responsibility is woven into the institutional fabric. By cultivating respect for the earth at an early age, JKIS empowers children to grow as conscious guardians of the planet.

Waste segregation bins, plastic-free guidelines, and student-led hygiene audits ensure our campus remains a vibrant, healthy sanctuary for exploration and collaborative growth.

EARLY PEDAGOGY • JET KIDS CASTLE

The Architecture of Play: Nurturing Early Genius

In the foundational years at Jet Kids Castle, play is far more than recreation — it is the primary engine of cognitive architecture. Through sensory tables, tactile building blocks, and color exploration, our early educators cultivate spatial intelligence, fine motor coordination, and intuitive numeracy. Every corner of the pre-primary sanctuary is designed to welcome questions and stimulate boundless curiosity.

Children learn to associate the school environment with joy and psychological safety, creating an enduring love for learning that propels them forward into their primary years.

EMOTIONAL GROWTH • CHARACTER FOUNDATIONS

Expressive Confidence & Peer Kindness

Whether role-playing as compassionate neighborhood doctors or stepping onto the miniature stage in costume, toddlers learn emotional regulation and interpersonal empathy. By celebrating every small milestone — from sharing crayons to narrating their own fables — JKIS builds the resilient bedrock for lifelong academic and social triumph.

Our nurturing educators guide each child's natural instincts, ensuring that kindness, respect, and creative risk-taking become instinctive habits from their earliest days.

Behind the Smiles: Understanding Teen Mental Health & Family Anchors

A clinical and parental guide to emotional anchors, active listening, and nurturing teenage resilience.

By Dr. Manisha Rathod & Dr. Vishal Rathod · Consultant Pediatricians & Adolescent Health Mentors

JKIS PARENTING & WELLNESS CELL

Adolescence is a transformative bridge between childhood and adulthood. Behind academic ambitions, bustling schedules, and bright smiles, teenagers often navigate an intense emotional landscape that demands empathetic understanding, patient presence, and unconditional support from parents.

01 1. Recognizing Subtle Behavioral Shifts

Teens rarely communicate distress directly in words. Instead, stress manifests as withdrawal from family hobbies, sudden irritability, shifts in sleep cycles, or reluctance to share daily anecdotes. Recognizing these subtle cues without immediate criticism is the foundational pillar of parental support.

02 2. Active Listening vs. Instant Problem-Solving

When teenagers open up, our parental instinct is often to offer rapid solutions or compare their struggles to our own past. However, adolescents primarily seek emotional validation. Replacing 'Why did you do that?' with 'That sounds tough, how can I help you work through it?' opens doors to authentic dialogue.

03 3. Balancing Academic Ambition with Well-being

High aspirations must be grounded in unconditional love. Ensure your child understands that their worth as an individual is never tied solely to an exam grade or trophy. Celebrate effort, resilience, and curiosity just as much as outcomes.

04 4. Creating Digital Hygiene & Family Anchor Moments

Establishing device-free dinner times, evening walks, or weekend reading rituals provides grounding anchors. When families share screen-free presence, teens feel anchored in safety, authenticity, and real human connection.

"Listening without judgment is the greatest anchor we can offer our children in an increasingly complex world."

Teaching at Jet Kids International School transcends the syllabus. It is the noble craft of igniting curiosity, guiding students through each challenge, and nurturing their hidden strengths before they discover them themselves.

In every lesson, we strive to turn passive listeners into vibrant, independent thinkers. When a child raises their hand without fear of mistake, true intellectual freedom begins.

Academic excellence is cultivated through steady daily habits: deep conceptual clarity, regular reading beyond textbooks, structured doubt resolution, and lifelong moral discipline.

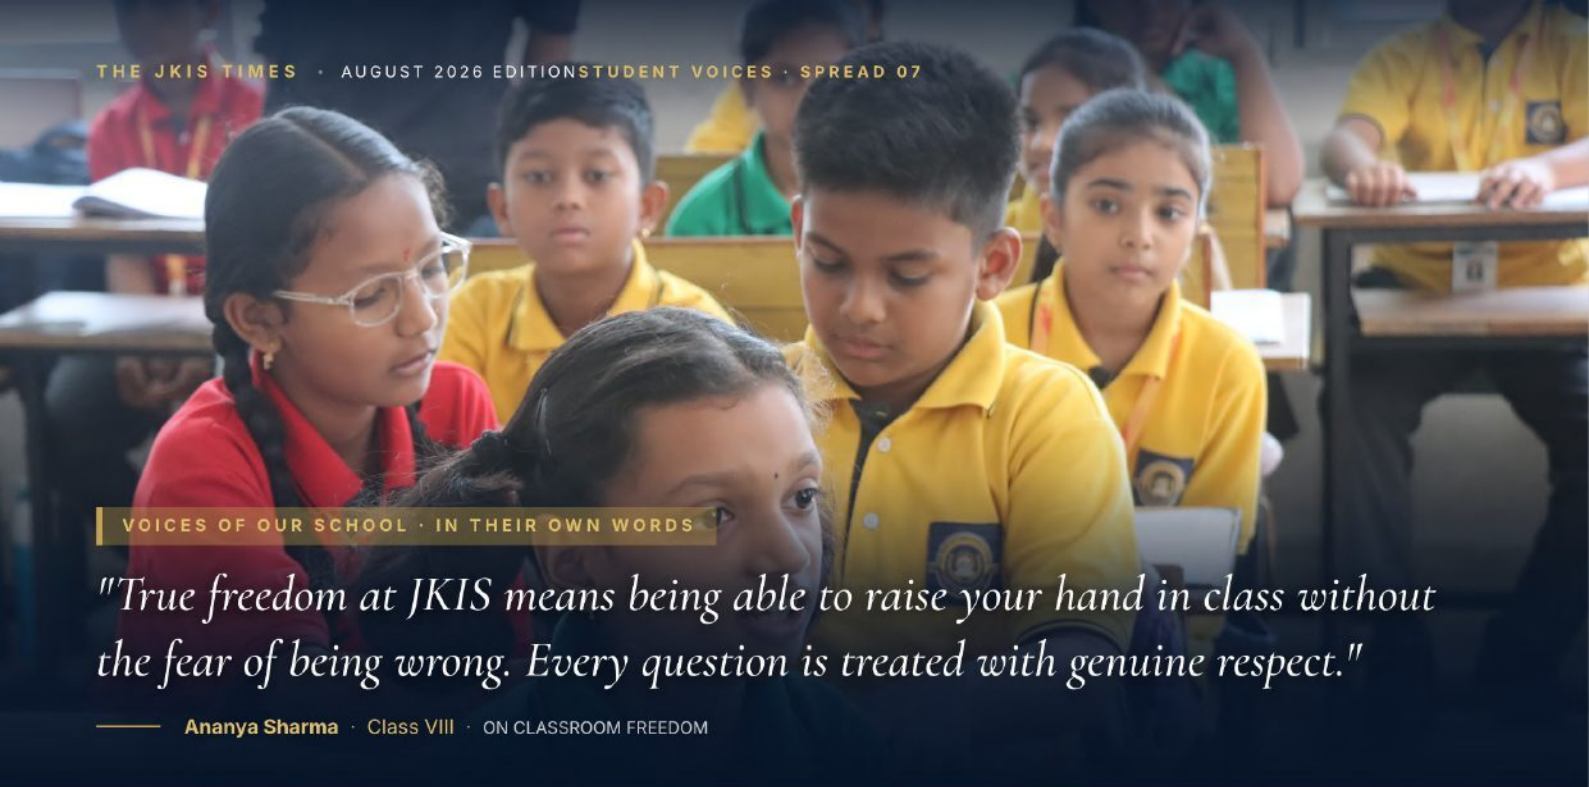

Mentoring learners toward district honours, sports laurels, and board distinctions reinforces our conviction that guided mentorship unlocks extraordinary capability in every child.

To our students: Cherish the wisdom of your teachers, remain ever curious each day, and remember that empathy, kindness, and character are your greatest lifelong triumphs.
